Bringing Safety Training to the Workplace

The N.C. Department of Labor is hitting the road with worker safety and health training. Labor One—the department’s 35-foot mobile training vehicle—provides free, on-site safety and health instruction.

Labor One allows the department to better serve North Carolina’s businesses and workers by bringing training straight to the jobsite. You request the topic, and we’ll provide the experts. Training is provided for the residential and commercial construction industries, as well as general industry and agriculture. The climate-controlled vehicle is equipped for up to 20 students.

Why Labor One?

- ❖ Hands-on practical training
- ❖ No travel required
- ❖ Bilingual trainers for Spanish-speaking workers
- ❖ Free reference material

Popular topics include:

- ❖ Fall protection and prevention
- ❖ Electrical safety
- ❖ Trenching and excavations
- ❖ Construction “Big 4” hazards: falls, crushed-by, struck-by and electrical hazards

Request Labor One

A phone call is all it takes to bring expert trainers to your jobsite. Call us at 1-800-NC-LABOR (800-625-2267) or go to the Web site at www.nclabor.com to make a request.

Inside vehicle: The climate-controlled vehicle holds up to 20 students and comes equipped with desks and chairs for students.

Safety and health experts will provide hands-on, practical training.
